

Auwa Arrival

Last revised: 5 August 2026 (three-pillar pivot). Living document. Load for any launch, promotion, channel, or campaign discussion.

STATUS SNAPSHOT (5 August 2026) — POST-PIVOT

The app is parked. Auwa is now a character IP business with a Japan practice attached. Auwa IS a character and a philosophy; what it MAKES is the book, the figure and the journal. No pillar count in any public copy. Full reasoning in `context/business/business.md` (REVISION note at the top) and `CLAUDE.md` (THE PIVOT). Read one of those before planning any campaign.

Where things stand. Website live, Awwwards Honorable Mention. ~8 journal articles, stalled since May. Instagram 2,667 (Rieko held the 72-season cadence right through Tom's six weeks away). Books 1 and 2 finished and at print test. Figure at prototype. App built, craft-passed, never released, now parked. Trademarks filed UK + Madrid (JP/US/EU/CN), WIPO payment due before 15 August. ~100 email subscribers. £0 revenue.

The diagnosis, unchanged since July and now acted on. Craft work is on or ahead of plan; capture, activation and shipping keep deferring behind craft. Two finished books sitting unreleased for months is the clearest possible symptom. The pivot removes the biggest source of that deferral (an app that needed months more work and a marketing campaign neither founder wanted to run) and replaces it with things that can actually ship this autumn.

What the arrival now means. No spike day, same as before, but the sequence has changed completely. The arrival is now: books out → figure drop → Fin DAC collab → craftsman outreach → collab editions → exhibition. Each step makes the next one easier, and the character becoming known is the through-line.

The single highest-leverage unlock, revised. In July it was the Quiet Letter. It still matters and should keep running, but the actual unlock now is publishing the books properly, because everything downstream (figure sales, collab yesses, institutional doors, licensing) depends on the character being known, and a publisher gives bookshop distribution, foreign rights and reviews that no amount of Instagram can buy. Colin Midson's view is the decisive input. IngramSpark POD is the fallback that can be executed any time.

Second highest-leverage, and much cheaper: the Fin DAC collab. Warm (he's a friend, he's already painted Rieko and promoted it, he already has an Auwa stencil, 96K followers, Rieko loves his work), and he is actively keen on visible Japanese collaboration partly because he has taken unfair appropriation accusations for his Asian-subject work — so a Japanese-authored programme is a genuinely good offer to him, not a favour asked. Its strategic value is that it produces the photograph every subsequent collab is pitched with. You cannot pitch a character-figure collaboration to a Japanese craftsman in words; you pitch it with an image of one that already exists.

Lifestyle design principle (unchanged, and the pivot serves it better). Auwa earning roughly £20-60K a year at a leisurely pace for 10+ years, largely passive, funding a good life without becoming a job. The revised Year 2 projection lands squarely in that band, where the old app-led plan projected £107-378K on a growth curve neither founder wanted to service. The face stays the character, never Tom or Rieko on camera on a schedule. Revenue lives in durable goods, editions and eventually licensing. Build now, coast later: the ~18 months from mid-2026 are the one stretch needing consistent effort.

SUPERSEDED SNAPSHOT (15 July 2026)

Kept for the record. The Phase 1 scorecard below is still an accurate account of where things got to; the plan it was measured against has since changed.

Tom was tools-down early June to mid-July following his father's death (5 June). Returning now with Auwa as near-exclusive focus for the rest of 2026. Where things stand against the Phase 1 plan (targets were end-June):

Phase 1 target	Actual
2-3K IG followers	2,553 ✓ (Rieko held the cadence through the gap)
400-600 subscribers	~ 91 ✗ (12 book / 41 store / 38 app) — the real miss
Awwwards submitted	Honorable Mention won; in line for SOTD (unlikely to win), scored well ✓
App in friends' hands	Built + full craft pass done (29 May); never released ✗

Warm-network shares	Not done (Colin, LinkedIn, Darius, Ivo, Fin all pending) ✗
12-15 articles, 2/mo	Stalled since May
Fin DAC article	Drafted, not shipped

The diagnosis: craft work (site, app, books, figure) is on or ahead of plan; capture and activation (email list, friends release, warm outreach) kept deferring behind craft and then stopped entirely during the gap. The Awwwards traffic (thousands of visits) converted poorly to follows/signups — mostly designers seeking inspiration, which gives backlinks and credibility, not customers. From here, capture + activation should outrank craft for a stretch, because the autumn figure drop and book pre-order need an owned audience, not just IG reach.

The single highest-leverage unlock: turn Rieko's every-5-days 72-seasons illustration into a newsletter ("a quiet letter every five days: the season, drawn"). Zero marginal cost, unique, gives a real reason to hand over an email, and seeds the eventual 72-piece print set's audience. Send one warm letter to the existing 91 first so the list doesn't decay.

Lifestyle design principle (the long game, agreed 15 Jul 2026). The end state Tom and Rieko actually want: Auwa earning roughly £20-60k a year at a leisurely pace for 10+ years, largely passive, funding a good life without becoming a job or a screen-treadmill. The named anti-pattern is the personality-led creator grind (Tom's friend Jonny Smith's Late Brake Show: valuable, but it's all on him, he must be in every video, he can't take breaks). Auwa is structurally the opposite and must stay that way. Rules to check every revenue decision against:

- The face is the character, not the founders. Auwa's public face is Rieko's character, never Tom-or-Rieko-on-camera. This is the single biggest reason Auwa can be passive where a YouTuber can't. Build nothing that requires either founder's face on a schedule.
- Revenue lives in durable goods, subscriptions, and licensing (books on POD, figure editions, app subs, eventual character licensing) — things that earn while you're in Japan for two months. Content (IG, Quiet Letter, journal) is the pace-able growth engine, not the income; it can slow, batch, or be delegated once the audience and catalogue exist.
- Build now, coast later. The ~18 months from mid-2026 are the one stretch needing consistent effort, to lay the asset base. After that the cadence drops to genuinely leisurely (1-2 figure drops a year, a book every 12-24 months, back-catalogue + subs ticking over). Don't go leisurely before the assets exist, or you get neither the joy nor the money.
- Don't judge the mission by £/day. Client work pays more per day and always will; that's the wrong yardstick (mission vs profession). The household already needs no income (see the personal finance project). What passive Auwa income really buys is the dignity of the venture paying its own way, not financial permission to stop client work, which they already have.

Rough trajectory discussed 15 Jul 2026 (baseline 2,553 IG / 91 subs): ~5-7.5k IG and ~1-1.8k subs by Jan 2027; ~12-20k IG and ~3-5k subs by end 2027; first real income from the autumn figure drop; calendar-2027 revenue ~£20-40k base case, figure-led, still net-negative for the year but proving each product line.

Other current-state notes: Books 1 & 2 both finished and at print test, releasing as a set (see book.md). Figure: Blender file done, multiple prototype sizes printed, bio-filament testing next, packaging concept = balsa box + ribbon + eco insert + handwritten Rieko card (see business.md 6.2). Trademarks: comprehensive global Madrid filing committed (see structure.md). Journal: Tom/Rieko considering making it a quieter "behind the scenes" layer rather than a co-equal pillar so the character/story shine — not decided; do NOT restructure the site now, just publish less (1/month or 1/season is fine). Grief-feature idea for the app: don't build a dedicated feature; instead use grief language as a test suite for the reflection engine (keeps the app out of the clinical-support space the spec rejects).

Why "Arrival" and Not "Launch"

Revised 5 Aug 2026. What Auwa makes ships over 18 months: Journal live already, Books this autumn, Store (figure and own goods) alongside them, collab editions from late 2026 into 2027, exhibition 2028+. No spike day. A cadence the brand sustains. Launches announce; arrivals are welcomed.

(Was: "The four pillars ship over 18 months: Journal live, App mid-May (friends first), Store in Year 2, Book when pre-orders justify a print run." The pillar framing itself was dropped later the same day — see CLAUDE.md.)

The Frame

1. Brand arrival, not product launch. Compounding, not a spike.
2. Low-intensity cadence. A three-to-four-day week rules out sprints. Short bursts at restart and launch moments; a calm three-a-week baseline between them.
3. Aim wide, filter ruthlessly. Japan interest is peak. A brand of this quality can reach 50-150K engaged followers inside three years. Every growth decision asks: does this attract the right person, or noise?

THE PLAN (revised 5 August 2026)

Sequenced. Complete one block before moving to the next; skip ahead only when priority demands.

o. Pay WIPO before 15 August

Must come from More Air. Nothing else moves until it's done. Miss it and the international trademark protection already applied for is lost. See `structure.md`.

1. Books out (Aug - Oct 2026)

The highest-leverage block in the whole document, and the one that unblocks the craftsman route.

- Rieko finishes the July print-test amends on Books 1 and 2.
- Send both PDFs to Colin Midson with the framed question: "Tell me honestly what you think, and what you'd do if this were yours." Two books read as a series, which is a materially stronger proposition than the single book he was sent before and got no reply to.
- Try the publisher route properly first. Set a decision date so it can't drift open-endedly. IngramSpark POD is executable at any time as the fallback, plus a pre-order-funded offset first edition (200-500 copies, signed, £45-60).
- The printed book is also the physical calling card for Japan. Craftsman outreach is gated on it existing, so this block gates block 4.

2. Figure finished and dropped (Sept - Nov 2026)

- Bio-filament testing, finish, packaging (balsa box, ribbon, eco insert, hand-written Rieko card), price.
- First edition 25-50 units, not 100. Weeks of print time plus finishing plus hand-packing before a single sale; "never reissued" makes a small first edition a feature.
- Simple Shopify shelf live alongside it: books, figure, prints, paper goods. Auwa-owned goods only.
- Seed with the existing figure lottery (already live on the site's bottom strip).

3. Fin DAC collab (autumn 2026)

Warm conversation, low cost, high strategic value. Send a blank, get it back painted, photograph it properly, drop it as a small edition. Pitch it to him as the first name in a Japanese-authored programme, not as a one-off favour — better offer, and it may make him a connector.

The photograph is the deliverable. Everything in block 5 is pitched with it.

4. Craftsman outreach opens (once books are printed)

Rieko, in Japanese, always. Two or three makers, not twenty.

- First approach is never "may we sell your work." It is "may we tell your story": a journal piece and Tom's photography, made as a gift, with full use granted to the maker. Commerce is the second conversation, usually on a second visit.
- In the parcel: the two printed books, a figure, and a one-page Japanese profile of Auwa and of Rieko as its creator. A maker who spent forty years on one craft takes a beautiful book seriously and a URL not at all.
- Kokeshi and daruma first (the Japanese blank-figure traditions — barely a stretch for the maker). Then lacquer/maki-e, Kanazawa gold leaf, ceramics, textile. Knives and functional crafts are year three if ever; their better use is editorial.
- Kyoto knife shop / Shigefusa: relationship and film, no product. He is too exclusive and forcing a product ask would break it.
- Target mid-career and successor makers, not masters with waiting lists.

5. Collab editions build (2027)

Artist line runs commercially (3-4 a year, including Japanese artists and illustrators). Craft line runs slowly (1-2 a year), with the maker manufacturing, holding and selling domestically and Auwa taking a small Western allocation. Full taxonomy and register guidance in `business.md` 6.2a.

6. One Japan trip a year, carrying everything

Craftsman meetings, journal photography, journey route recon and collab conversations in the same fortnight. Constrained to one trip by the dog and the quality bar. Plan it as a single event rather than four competing ambitions.

7. Institutional route (2028+)

Accumulate craft pieces until an exhibition exists. Ladder: London Craft Week first (annual, May, open participation), then Daiwa Anglo-Japanese Foundation / Japan Foundation London spaces, then an independent design gallery, then Japan House as a year four or five destination. Apply for a UK-Japan cultural grant (Daiwa, Great Britain Sasakawa, Japan Foundation) once two or three pieces exist and can be photographed. See `business.md` 6.2a and `japan.md`.

8. Ongoing throughout

- Journal back to ~1 article/month, weighted toward makers and places.
- Instagram on one account, 72-season cadence, character animation, plus product teasers and reveals.
- Quiet Letter and the Meta lead ads keep running (leads at under £1, well under the £2 gate).
- ~~Website to three doors~~ — DONE 5 Aug 2026. Shipped without the count: "Four ways in." became "What we make.", the character section moved above it, `/app` is parked and noindexed.

SUPERSEDED PLAN (April - July 2026)

Retained for the record. Most of blocks 1-7 below were delivered; the app and marketplace elements are retired.

Sequenced chronologically. Use as a living todo list. Complete one block before moving to the next; skip ahead when priority demands. Launch is now a few hours a day with tomorrow (Fri 24 April) full-time, then time pivots to app build and More Air productised services.

1. Get to 9 IG posts (this week and next)

The highest-leverage work. Every warm share (LinkedIn, family, peers, Darius, Ivo, Fin, Colin) compounds when the grid is full. A sparse grid undermines all of them. Aim for 9 strong posts by end of week 2 of the restart.

Friday 24 April, full-time priorities:

- Imagen tone-adjustment pass on the top 10-15 article hero images. Subtle tone only, no upscaling, no restyling. Side-by-side compare against originals; reject any visible AI touch. These images serve website and IG simultaneously.

- Build out the IG content queue. Use `/instagram:post` and `/instagram:slideshow` to prepare 6-8 posts in the shared Dropbox `social` folder (see `AUWA_SOCIAL_ROOT`). Mix: Rieko character Reels from her queue, editorial slideshows from existing journal articles, atmospheric photographs, one Japanese-wisdom carousel. Queue sits ready; daily posting then becomes a copy-paste job rather than a daily-write job.
- Book teaser upgrade. Pick one of two options and ship Friday if time allows:
 - (a) Auto-play slideshow of a few inside-the-book images in the teaser image area.
 - (b) Button that opens a sample preview (modal or page) with a handful of book spreads to flick through.
 - Option (b) invites more engagement and reads better for Awwwards; (a) needs no new page. My lean: (b). If Friday runs short, ship (a) now and iterate to (b) next week.

Internal work that proceeds in parallel (no external touchpoints):

- Fin DAC article draft. His artwork of Rieko and her mum. Draft this week, publish once the grid has reached 9 posts. No external share yet.
- Continue daily IG posts from the queue. Figma slideshow template to be built when there's a natural slot; for now the brief from `/instagram:slideshow` is enough for Rieko to lay up slides manually.

Principle. Every external touchpoint (email to Kyoto shop, brief to Colin, LinkedIn post, family share, peer shares, Darius, Ivo, Fin reconnect) waits for the grid. Japan especially weights visible social presence as a credibility signal, and Shigefusa's sons will judge IG before anything else. A first impression you can't redo. Hold the line on all external activation until the grid is ready.

2. Warm network activation (once the grid has ~9 posts)

Gated on the grid. First impression matters more than speed of invitation. Japan especially reads social presence as a credibility signal; Shigefusa's sons, Fin's audience, and Tom's LinkedIn peers all will check the IG before engaging.

- Kyoto knife shop email (Rieko, in Japanese) for Shigefusa. Full approach drafted in the Shigefusa section below.
- Tom's LinkedIn post. Warm, proud, no ask. Template in Channel Strategy below.
- Quiet family share. Cary-Elwes side; brothers. Single warm note each.
- Peer share: Brad Porter and Axel Meyer. No ask. Honest read welcomed.
- Darius (CMO friend). Strategic review of the launch approach.
- Ivo Weevers. Launch sequencing input; he has sold an app.

- Fin DAC. Send him the now-published Fin article link. Warm reconnection. Collab conversation becomes natural later.
- Colin (book promoter). Share the book draft with the framed question: "Tell me honestly what you think, and what you'd do if this were yours." His publisher-route view is decisive.

3. Small paid spend (after 9 IG posts are live)

£200-400 test behind the Auwa face video Reel. Targeting design-conscious, Japan-interested users in UK/US/AU. Goal: lift 700 to 1,500-2,000 quality followers at restart. Gate: only begin once the grid holds nine posts so visitors arriving via ad see a complete brand, not a lonely first post.

4. Awwwards SOTD submission (target Tue 12 or Wed 13 May)

Full checklist in CLAUDE.md under AWWWARDS READINESS. Submission gates, all must be true:

1. At least one SOTD teaser upgrade shipped (Book minimum).
2. Nine strong IG posts live. Quality gate, not count gate.
3. Noindex audit passed (/home-1 , /brand , /instagram , /book/1 , /book/2 all carry `robots: { index: false, follow: false }` and live in `robots.ts` disallow).
4. Photography credit pass done (every editorial image credits Tom).

Miss any gate, push submission one week. Never submit to beat a date.

Submission inputs pre-drafted. See Awwwards Prep section below.

5. App built, friends-released (mid-May)

Share with Tom's warm network and early IG followers who've expressed interest. Free tier only. Direct via DM or email. Not a public moment. Use friend feedback to refine before public release.

Public app release happens when IG has a solid following. Realistically late summer or early autumn depending on growth. No strict Q4 gate.

6. Second and third teaser upgrades (week of 28 April and week of 5 May)

App (/app). Mocked Kokoro card below the hero: gradient background in a Yamato state colour, Auwa character centred, three lines of poetic reflection, calligraphic kō stamp. Shows the app's output without the app existing yet.

Store (/store). "First arrivals" strip of 6-8 craftsman objects with Monolise research trip photography. Each card: 4:5 portrait object photo, craftsman name (12px uppercase), object name (18-20px EB Garamond), one-sentence description. Uses StripReveal for the reveal pattern.

7. Meet Auwa cursor-follow (week of 5 May, best-effort)

SOTD signature interaction. Auwa's gaze tracks the cursor on desktop. Rieko produces 3-5 illustrated frames over the coming week. Tom implements in 1-2 hour daily slots during app-build week. If not ready by submission, ship post-submission as an Awwwards entry update; judges accept these.

8. Ongoing through June

- Rieko: collab partner shortlist + Japanese one-pager. 5-10 partners, tiered. (Revised May 2026: store model pivoted from multi-vendor marketplace to first-party + collab editions. Shortlist scope is now smaller and deeper, not broader and lighter. Each partner is a potential collab edition, not a merchant.)
- Newsletter "arrival" letter to existing subscribers in early May. One paragraph, one link. Warm, not promotional.
- Continue journal publishing at roughly two articles per month.
- Begin Seasonal Journey internal planning; see Seasonal Journeys section.

Phase 1 target by end of June: 2-3K IG followers, 400-600 subscribers, 12-15 published articles, Fin DAC article shipped, Awwwards submitted, all warm-network shares done, collab partner shortlist drafted, app in friends' hands.

9. Phase 2 onward (summer 2026 into 2027)

With Phase 1 targets met:

- App public release when IG has solid following.
- Guest articles pitched to two aligned publications (It's Nice That and Cereal are my picks).
- First figure edition drop via subscriber lottery (the site's bottom-strip entry teaser already seeds this).
- First Seasonal Journey trialled by Tom and Rieko alone in 2027.

- Book pre-order campaign opens once the draft is polished.
 - Store launches in Year 1 (autumn 2026) with the first Auwa figure drop. First collab edition (Fin DAC × Auwa figure) follows in late Year 1 or early Year 2. Revised May 2026 timing given the figure's active 3D-printing progress; the old "Year 2 store" line is retired.

Channel Strategy

Instagram: primary. Full detail in `instagram.md`. Three posts per week sustainably, with the daily restart burst for the first two to three weeks. Character Reels at around 35% weight. Editorial slideshows from journal articles. Seasonal atmospheric posts. This is where the audience is built.

LinkedIn: peer amplification. Four personal Tom posts across 18 months: restart share (now), app arrival, store opening, book release. Not a daily channel. The Auwa company page uses the locked tagline, description, and imagery.

Tom's restart post template:

"A project Rieko and I have been quietly building for ten years: Auwa, a quiet return to the Japanese belief that a life force, a kokoro, resides in all things. Illustration, writing, photography, a daily practice to come. Made with care, not a client project for once. auwa.life"

Awwwards and design recognition. Submit once the site has been live and stable with 12-15 articles up and the submission gates are green. Submit to Awwwards (£150 Pro), SiteInspire, CSS Design Awards, Typewolf, Godly, Minimal.gallery, httpster.

Guest articles (Phase 2). Pick two of: It's Nice That (most likely to land), Cereal (brand match), Apartamento, Openhouse, Kinfolk (dream, pitch after app lands), Aeon, Tokyo Weekender. One landed piece outperforms five pitched and ignored.

Organic link-building. Three to five personal emails a month in Phase 2. Subject line human, body two to three sentences, link to one specific Auwa piece, no ask. Aligned sites: Nalata Nalata, Analogue Life, Rikumo, Tortoise, Kinto, Ignant, Remodelista, Freunde von Freunden, Hole and Corner, Kyoto Journal, Tofugu.

Email outreach to niche communities (Phase 2). Japan Society UK, Daiwa Anglo-Japanese Foundation, Japan Foundation London, British Museum Japan curators, V&A Japan team, SOAS Japan Research Centre, Japan Society NYC, Japan House LA, Portland Japanese Garden, r/japantravel, r/chefknives. Each a single personalised email offering something (a piece, an event, a partnership), never a pitch.

Press: Phase 3 onward. Freelancers who have written for Wallpaper*, Monocle, Wired, Vogue Business, Dezeen.

One Instagram account, not two (decided 5 Aug 2026). The question was whether the store deserves its own handle separate from the character and story. It does not. Splitting a 2,667-follower audience that took a year to build leaves two weak accounts and doubles the work, which is exactly the treadmill the lifestyle principle rules out. Auwa's whole thesis is one world with several ways in, and running @auwastore separately concedes that the character and the objects are different brands, which is the thing most important to avoid being true. Niwaki runs one account across tools, workwear, books, workshops and a shop. Revisit only when the store genuinely produces its own weekly content volume and audience mismatch is demonstrated. The second surface is Pinterest, not a second Instagram.

Channel expansion triggers (added 22 Jul 2026). Stay Instagram + organic/Journal as the core for now. Judge every new channel by one filter: does it keep working while we're in Japan (compounding, evergreen) or does it need feeding every day (a treadmill)? Favour the first.

- Pinterest — reconsider adding now (the one exception to IG-only). Pinterest is a visual search engine, not a social feed: pins compound like SEO and last for years, Japandi / Japanese-aesthetic search is up 405%, and Rieko's illustration plus Tom's photography is exactly what performs there. Low effort (repurpose the existing asset library), feeds the site and the list, no daily hand-cranking. That's why it moves out of "what we don't do." Trial it with existing assets before committing to a cadence.
- YouTube — gated on the Shigefusa film existing, NOT on 5K followers. Whenever the film lands, publish it. It's the evergreen documentary anchor.
- TikTok — at 5K IG followers. A near-zero-effort repost of the best Reels, so no rush and nothing to gain before then.

What we don't do (for now): Twitter/X, Threads, Facebook page as a content channel. (TikTok waits for 5K; YouTube waits for the Shigefusa film; Pinterest is under trial, per the triggers above.)

Footer social links policy. Only show icons for platforms that carry real content. Dead links on a premium brand site read as unfinished craft, and Awwwards judges click footer icons. Secure all handles (done), but hide each platform's footer icon until it has at least three to four pieces of content. Implement as a simple boolean per platform in a config file so icons can be turned on progressively. Current state: Instagram on, everything else off until seeded.

Budget: £2-3K across 12 months

- Small restart boost (after 9 posts are live): £200-400.
- App arrival spend (autumn 2026): £1,400-1,800.
- Design award fees: £150-300.
- Newsletter growth ads: £200-300.
- Contingency: £200-400.

Most of the marketing value comes from consistent content and thoughtful outreach, both free. Paid spend amplifies what's working, it doesn't create traction where there is none.

Seasonal Journeys (programme, not a pillar)

A small annual guided Japan experience for foreigners. Five people maximum, four to six days, once a year (constrained by the dog in UK and by quality).

This is not a fifth pillar. The homepage architecture stays at four (Journal, Store, App, Book). Journeys exist inside the brand as a programme that emerges naturally from Journal content and Store craftsman relationships. Public presence:

- Soft CTA at the foot of relevant journal articles (craftsman profiles, travel pieces, onsen essays).
- A `/journeys` page when the first trip is imminent. Not before.
- A Resend segment of interested names, grown quietly.

Pilot plan. Tom and Rieko do the first trip alone in 2027. Purpose: format discovery, content generation, logistics shakedown. No paying customers on the first trip. Real bookings open only after the pilot.

Why it matters commercially. At £3-4K per person, five people per trip is £15-20K at healthy margin. One trip a year funds significant chunks of annual brand costs, and the content produced (writing, photography, possibly film) seeds the following year's editorial output.

Where it connects. Craftsman outreach for the Store often overlaps with craftsmen who might welcome a small respectful annual visit. Rieko's Japanese-language outreach can open both conversations in one email where the fit is right.

Sign-up Hooks

The figure lottery is already live via the site's bottom strip ("WIN FIRST EDITION Auwa FIGURE" with Enter button linking to `/store`). Store teaser copy updated to:

"Japanese craftsman objects, and our own figure editions. Small, signed, hand-finished. Sign up for the opening, and a chance to win our first edition."

This is the primary scarcity hook. Additional hooks earn their place over time:

- Welcome PDF on signup. A 10-page illustrated guide, Rieko-designed. Produced once, compounds forever. Build when time allows.
- Subscriber early access to journal articles (48 hours ahead). Frames the newsletter as membership.
- Hand-signed Rieko postcard at signup to real postal addresses. One-time, gated.
- First chapter of the book digitally for subscribers once the book is ready.

Shigefusa and the first YouTube moment

Warm connection through the Kyoto knife shop owner from whom Tom bought his Shigefusa knife. Rieko drafts the ask in Japanese this week (template prepared in prior session). Posture: producer-in-service-of-artist, not journalist-taking. The film would be the gift; Auwa gets distribution permission, the shop and Shigefusa-san get full use.

If it lands: first YouTube piece, signature documentary anchor, opens craftsman doors everywhere else.

If not: playbook learned for the next master. Either outcome is useful.

No intention to carry Shigefusa in the Auwa store. He is too exclusive; forcing that ask would break the relationship.

Awwwards SOTD Submission Prep

The two SOTD additions

Meet Auwa cursor-follow (signature interaction). Full spec in the Plan section 7.

Teaser page upgrades (Book, App, Store). Full spec in the Plan sections 1 and 6.

Submission inputs (pre-drafted)

- Title: Auwa
- URL: <https://auwa.life>
- Tagline (under 70 chars): A quiet return to Japanese awareness. Kokoro in all things.
- Short description (under 400 chars): Auwa is a Japanese awareness brand built on the ancient belief that a life force, a kokoro, resides in all things. A character, a philosophy, a world, expressed through a journal from Japan, a daily awareness practice, a store of craftsman objects, and an illustrated world. Editorial, meditative, and photographed entirely by the founders.
- Primary category: Wellbeing
- Tags: Editorial, Typography, Animation, Transitions, Interaction Design, Cultural, Storytelling
- Preview image (1400×787 JPG, under 1MB): close crop of Auwa's face from the hero video.

Pre-submission polish pass

Two to three hours the day before submission. Walk through the site desktop and mobile simultaneously with fresh eyes. Look for: broken links, lazy-loaded images that blink in late, console errors, mobile menu edge cases, footer behaviour on short pages, contact email obfuscation rendering correctly, all article OG images present, audio toggle working across pages, Lenis smooth scroll not conflicting with horizontal scrollers. Full checklist in CLAUDE.md "AWWWARDS READINESS."

Decisions

~~App before Store.~~ SUPERSEDED 5 Aug 2026: the app is parked. Books and figure debut instead, then the collab programme, then craftsman outreach once the books are printed. Original reasoning kept for the record: App is closer to ready, the cleaner debut product, and easier to iterate on real usage. Store craftsman outreach runs in parallel.

Book release: hybrid POD + pre-order offset — reweighted 5 Aug 2026. Still the fallback, but try a publisher first, because the whole business now rests on the character becoming known and bookshop distribution, foreign rights and reviews cannot be bought. Original note below still applies to the self-published route.

Book release: hybrid POD + pre-order offset. IngramSpark print-on-demand as the always-available edition (unit cost £8-15, retail £28-35, zero upfront). Pre-order campaign funds a short offset run (200-500 copies) for a signed first edition at £45-60. Pre-orders pay for the print; no capital committed upfront. Campaign opens in Phase 2 once the draft is polished and Colin's view is in.

Year 1 Success (by April 2027) — revised 5 Aug 2026

The old targets were written when the app was the flagship and assumed a much steeper follower curve. These are deliberately more modest and more object-shaped.

- Books published, either by a publisher or as POD plus a signed first edition. Non-negotiable — this is the year's real deliverable.
- First figure edition sold out (25-50 units), with a waitlist for edition two.
- Fin DAC collab shipped and photographed.
- First revenue on the board, from any line. £4-13K is the modelled range.
- 1-2 Japanese makers in genuine conversation, with at least one journal piece published about one of them.
- 5-8K genuine Instagram followers, one account.
- 1-2K email subscribers.
- 15-25 journal articles, weighted to makers and places.
- Shigefusa film shipped or in the can.
- Quiet Letter at a sustainable cadence.

Slow, dignified, correct for the brand.

Year 2 Success (by April 2028)

- First craft collab edition made and shipped by a named Japanese maker.
- 3-4 artist collab editions shipped, at least one by a Japanese artist.
- Second and third figure editions dropped.
- Books reviewed somewhere aligned; Books 3 and 4 in progress.
- Store running as a small, considered shelf with no held third-party stock.
- First Seasonal Journey piloted by Tom and Rieko alone, with the Package Travel question resolved before any deposit is taken.
- 15-30K Instagram followers.
- Revenue in the £27-120K band, which is the £20-60K-at-leisure target arriving.
- A UK-Japan grant applied for, and a first small exhibition or London Craft Week presence in view.
- Recognisable position: "the illustrated Japanese world you can own a piece of."

Year 2 is where the brand stops being a project. Year 1 earns the right to Year 2.

(Retired from the old lists: app user targets, the full first-party range including Kokoro prints, 40-75K followers, and "the Japanese awareness brand" positioning, which was app-derived.)
